Just so long as you don't start emitting an Ominous Hum.

This made me think of you.

Ice climbing--aid climbing in general--is really not my thing, actually.

And indoor ice climbing? boggles

I don't know how I made that mistake--I was sure that you were amongst the folks I know here that climb.

I rock climb and boulder. Technical climbing is not the same thing as aid climbing.

With what I do, you use your hands and feet to go up, not pitons or ascenders or ice axes.

Ice climbing is a strange form of frozen sadomasochism. Although I know several vanilla seeming folks that really liked it. I dunno.

Ah, now see, I learned something from you today. I thought climbing was climbing. I wasn't aware of the differences between technical and aid. Thanks!
